We have no idea who we ll become when we re playing with our dolls, building Lego cities, and using our stuffed animals to practice our particular brand of veterinarian medicine. We only know that we want to be happy. However, what do we do when we grow up and find happy evading our grasping hands? Do we settle into a hum-drum existence? Do we use whatever we can find to ease the disappointment? Or do we go on an exhausting hunt for an elusive prey? What if the answer is knocking at the door right now?
